

Eclectic Club

“Eclectic”, the literary and debating society of Indian Institute of Information Technology Pune has seen all the heights and depths in the many years of its existence. What started just as a club for literary enthusiasts in the institute to come together and colloquially “hang-out” has now become a professional society with a widespread and a respected community with a social responsibility, credit to which would definitely go to our members who have represented us on various national platforms.

We see, we forget. We speak, we know. We write, we remember. As a community, we aim to instill the same feeling amongst our members. We promote public speaking and writing as forms of self-expression. The way to do them rightly in a way which has a substantial impact needs dedication and a motivation towards the cause and language, and we as a community try to encourage and support the best to our abilities, anyone interested and willing.
